

BUILDING FROM THE BOTTOM UP

WORKER PERSPECTIVES ON UPWARD MOBILITY

Introduction

In 2020, Harvard Business School’s Project on Managing the Future of Work designed two surveys to understand the barriers and contributors to low-wage workers achieving upward mobility and the employer actions that would best help these workers. In the fall of 2020, a third-party firm administered the two surveys—one to a panel of employers and one to a panel of low-wage workers.

This survey instrument was administered as an online survey of 1,025 low-wage workers in the U.S. aged 21 or older conducted September–November 2020 by the Project on Managing the Future of Work at Harvard Business School.

The worker survey included questions about the worker’s demographics, their employment history, their current employment circumstances, their current primary employer, their beliefs about their opportunities for or barriers to upward mobility, their primary employer’s actions to support low-wage workers’ upward mobility, their perspectives on their primary employer, their attitudes about upward mobility, and their thoughts about their prospects for future upward mobility.

BUILDING FROM THE BOTTOM UP

METHODOLOGY

The worker survey was fielded to 1,025 workers in the U.S. aged 21 or older from September-November 2020. To ensure the survey was representative of the population of low-wage workers, quotas were set during survey collection for the following variables: upward mobility achievement, wage, firm size, age, race, gender, education level, geography, and industry. In order to gather enough respondents, some of these quotas were relaxed near the end of survey collection. (For a detailed picture of the survey demographics, see Appendix III in the main report.)

All respondents were consistently employed for the three years prior to January 2020. Respondents were either employed at the same company over the prior three years or had switched companies or roles, but were consistently employed (e.g., were not unemployed for longer than one month) for the entire period. All respondents who were not employed as a full-time or part-time worker—that is, students, freelance or gig workers, temporary workers, those who were self-employed, those who were unemployed, and those who were retired—were all excluded from this survey. Additionally, all respondents who had a bachelor's degree or more were excluded.

Low-wage workers were defined as anyone earning $40,000 per year or less (approximately $20 per hour for 40 hours per week). To calculate annual income from hourly wage, the researchers used an approximation of 2,000 hours per year for full-time work, multiplied by the hourly wage rate. Thus, any respondent who selected they earned more than $40,000 per year was not included. Respondents who worked at more than one company at a time were asked to answer the questions about their primary company at which they worked the most hours per week. Reminders were given about the definition of upward mobility, defined as follows in the survey: "Upward mobility is an improvement in skills that enhances a worker's productivity and results in an increase in the worker's pay or a promotion or both."

Due to the timing of the survey collection during the Covid-19 pandemic, respondents were asked to answer all questions in the survey from the perspective of their situation in January 2020, prior to the outbreak of Covid-19 in the United States, unless otherwise specified. Frequent reminders were provided to respondents throughout the online survey to ensure respondents were answering questions about their situation pre-Covid. A section was included at the end of the survey to understand the impact of Covid-19 on respondents' employment situation and attitudes toward upward mobility.

Notes on how to read this survey:

Text blocks in brackets are programming instructions for the survey firm. TERMINATE means that the survey should end immediately for a respondent with that answer choice.

Introduction

Thank you for being willing to participate in this survey! We appreciate you taking the time to contribute to this research. Through this survey, we seek to understand the upward mobility of workers like you and the actions companies can take to increase the upward mobility of workers like you.

We define upward mobility as an improvement in skills that enhances a worker's productivity and results in an increase in the worker's pay, a promotion, or both.

EXAMPLE OF UPWARD MOBILITY

One example of upward mobility is a Retail Sales Associate earning $13.50 per hour who becomes a Customer Service Representative earning $17.00 per hour and then a Warehouse Supervisor earning $25.75 per hour. Another example is a Hotel Desk Clerk earning $12.50 per hour who becomes a Hospitality Front Office Shift Lead earning $18.75 per hour and then an Operations Supervisor earning $30.50 per hour.

DEFINITIONS

Throughout the survey, we have provided definitions of key terms. Anywhere a word or phrase is highlighted, you can hover over the word or phrase (or tap, if you are using a mobile device) to view the definition. To hide the definition, move your cursor away (or tap elsewhere on the screen, for mobile devices).

A NOTE ABOUT THIS SURVEY'S TIME PERIOD GIVEN COVID-19

We would like to learn about your employment experiences and your perspectives on actions your current company may have taken to support your upward mobility. We understand that your employment situation may have changed in response to the recent novel coronavirus pandemic (COVID-19).

However, we want to understand your typical employment situation. As you complete this survey, please answer any question about your employment from a perspective of your employment in January 2020, prior to the outbreak of COVID-19 in the United States.

YOUR PARTICIPATION IN THIS SURVEY

We expect the survey to take approximately 40 minutes to complete. You may stop the survey and return to it at any time. We encourage you to finish the survey in one session as the survey may reach its quota, and you would not be able to resume the survey once the quota has been reached.

We will keep all information you provide strictly confidential. Your responses will not be used for any kind of solicitation, marketing, or advertising purposes. We will use your responses only in aggregate and only for research purposes. Thank you for participating in this research.

Thank you for completing section two! When you complete this next section, you will be more than halfway done, well on your way to receiving your special reward for finishing the full survey! This next section is the longest section of the survey. Thank you for your patience as you go through this—you are making a difference in the lives of workers like you by sharing your thoughts about your company and your upward mobility. Thank you for sticking with this survey!

This third core section focuses on business practices that could help support your upward mobility. Please answer the questions in this section about the company you worked at in January 2020, prior to the emergence of COVID-19 in the United States. COMPANY PRACTICES SUB-SECTIONS

The questions in each sub-section ask about your awareness of and experience with company practices the researchers have identified that can support the upward mobility of workers. Each sub-section includes company practices relevant to a particular stage of your time at a company:

- Pre-employment
- Hiring
- Onboarding
- On-the-job support
- Pathways for advancement
- Offboarding and post-exit

DEFINITION OF UPWARD MOBILITY REMINDER

Upward mobility is an improvement in skills that enhances a worker's productivity and results in an increase in the worker's pay, a promotion, or both.
